Honouring a life dedicated to community

BY STEPHANIE MYLES
Didsbury Review

Didsbury said goodbye to a great friend and pillar of the community last week.

Greg Hnatiuk, the town's special constable and deputy fire chief, passed away suddenly last Tuesday after suffering a heart attack. He was 51.

During his life, Hnatiuk's impact on the community is undeniable. Testimony of his good character is endless - he is consistently described as a great friend, leader and mentor by good friends and acquaintances alike.

"He had a heart of gold," said Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer of the Didsbury RCMP. "If anybody ever needed anything, all they had to do was ask Greg and he was there."

"The community has lost someone very important," said Walter O'Dell, who worked alongside Hnatiuk as a volunteer firefighter. "He'll definitely be someone who's hard to replace."

The day after Hnatiuk's death, Didsbury's volunteer firefighters gathered as usual for their weekly training session.

"That's what Greg would've wanted. Carry on," said Rick Mousseau, fire chief. During the 27 years he worked with Hnatiuk as a firefighter, Mousseau said the two became best friends. They went camping and fishing together, and Mousseau described some of their best times as sitting around smoking cigars and enjoying a few drinks.

"He's just part of me," said Mousseau. "We've known each other so long, you never forget. You can't help but remember."

By all accounts, Hnatiuk was a giving, caring person, both for his family and friends and his community. He looked after the people of Didsbury as a volunteer firefighter for over 25 years and as the town's special constable. Local residents describe him as the kind of officer who would just as soon throw snowballs at you as give you a parking ticket.

"He didn't want to be the nasty cop. He'd give someone a break if they deserved it. But I wouldn't want to cross him," said Doug Steven, Hnatiuk's long-time fire department colleague.

"It's hard to put into words," said Jenni Dodman, also a volunteer firefighter. "He had a smile for everyone. ... He was a great person who gave everybody a chance."

O'Dell said Hnatiuk's friendship and expertise will be missed.

"A lot of the junior guys looked up to him. He never was mad ... he never really snapped at anyone unless they deserved it," he said.

"He was the type of guy I had respect for, almost like a father to me."

Hnatiuk's position as a pillar of the community was evident at his funeral on Saturday, where over a hundred RCMP, firefighters and special constables from around the region showed the ultimate respect with an honour guard. Friends and community members also crowded into St. Stephen's Catholic Church in Olds, where it was standing room only, in a sign of support for Greg's wife, Ann, and two sons, Matt and Todd.

While there will be a gap in the community and Didsbury's close-knit firefighter family where Hnatiuk used to be, Mike O'Dell, the fire department's training officer, said his memory will live on.

"We're tough. We'll get through it. Greg expects us to be professional and that's what we'll do," he said. "He's someone we'll look up to."

"He's just part of me. We've known each other so long, you never forget. You can't help but remember."

Anti-vandalism awareness campaign launched

Police, town council say prevention the key

BY STEPHANIE MYLES
Didsbury Review

Didsbury RCMP are trying to curb vandalism in the community by raising public awareness.

Sgt. Kevin O'Dwyer said RCMP will be posting signs around town to draw attention to the issue and encourage the public to keep a more watchful eye.

"We're trying to bring people's awareness that vandalism is a concern in the community, it is an issue," said O'Dwyer. "The only way that we can address it is with the help of the community itself."

Town council recently agreed to buy 10 signs at a total cost of about $600.

O'Dwyer said RCMP are working with the town to develop the wording of the signs.

"You want something that's fairly catchy for people, that's going to stick in their minds," he said.

Reducing vandalism is priority for the town's RCMP because community members and council have expressed concern, said O'Dwyer.

"Being a vandalism-free community would be wonderful, and sometimes these signs will jog people's memories," he said. "We want them to call (the RCMP) so that hopefully we can put a stop to this."

Council approved buying the signs to help the RCMP do their job, said Dorothy Moore, Didsbury's mayor, but she doesn't think Didsbury's youth are prone to vandalism.

"It's more of a preventative, proactive way of looking at it," she said.

"We basically have great kids and what we want to do is promote that and perhaps do proactive things that would kind of hinder the spread of anything negative amongst our kids."

The signs will go up around town once the RCMP have chosen a design.

Hello, Didsbury

STEPHANIE MYLES

Hello, Didsbury. I've just come down the road from the Olds Albertan to take over as editor of the Didsbury Review, and let me say, it is quite an honour to be here.

It's unfortunate we have to meet under such sad circumstances. I am deeply sorry for the loss of Greg Hnatiuk, your special constable and deputy fire chief. In speaking with his friends and colleagues, I can tell he was an important part of the community and will be deeply missed. I am certain I'm missing out for not having had the chance to meet him.

In the short time I've been in Didsbury, I've noticed a few things about your town. First and foremost, the people. I have unfortunately met most people under sad circumstances, but if there may be a silver lining to this dark cloud, it is that the community spirit in Didsbury shines through during times like this. Everyone has been so kind, helpful and welcoming, despite the difficulties they're experiencing.

Second, Didsbury is chock full of small-town charm – but I'm sure you all knew that already. You have some of the most beautiful old houses I've ever seen, and it says a lot for the town that people take the time and effort to restore and care for them.

And third, Didsbury might be a small town, but from what I can tell, it is not immune to the effects of Alberta's economic growth. With major new residential areas in the works, it looks like the town will be welcoming a slew of new residents in the next few years. I think this is an exciting time for Didsbury, and I'm sure the town can meet the challenge of balancing growth with maintaining its small-town feel.

Now I suppose you'll want to know a little bit about me. I grew up in a small town in New Brunswick – about 1,200 people strong – so I know how things work in a small town. I'm going to let you in on a little secret right now: small-town New Brunswick and small-town Alberta have a lot in common, as far as I can tell. The greatest similarity is the people – friendly, open and down-to-earth, which I appreciate.

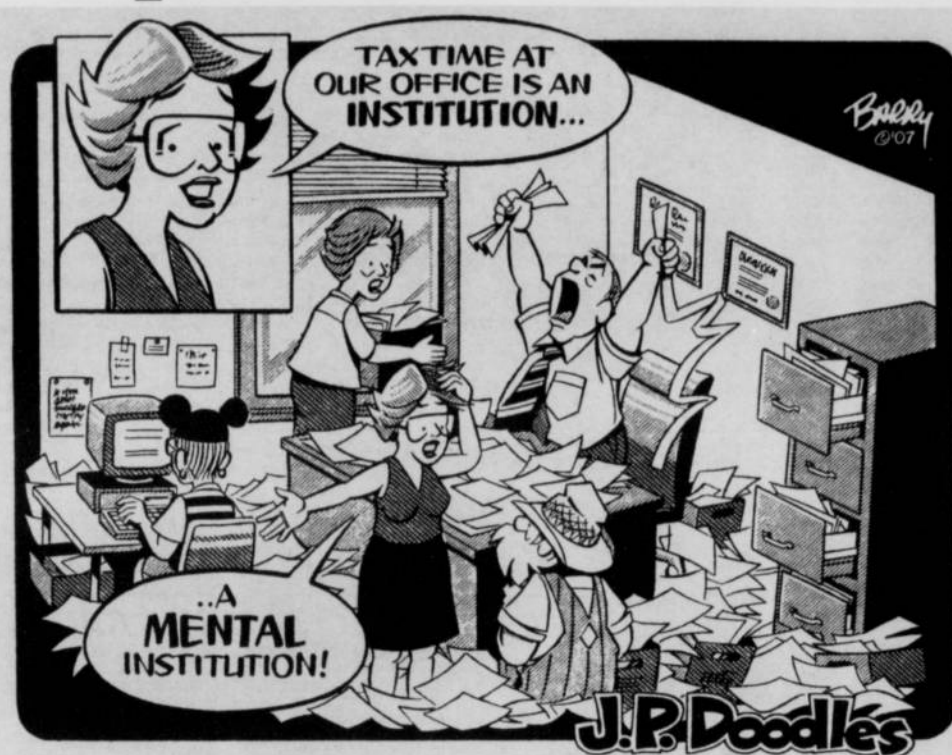

After finishing high school in N.B., I lived in Ottawa for five years, four of which were spent at Carleton University, where I earned a Bachelor of Journalism. I moved from Ottawa to Olds in October to pursue my career as a journalist, and the powers that be have now landed me on your doorstep, Didsbury.

Now, let's stop right there. To those of you who would be tempted to brush me off as "just another Easterner," please don't be so quick to judge. I believe there's something to be said for my status as a relative newcomer to the West, and to Didsbury, for that matter. I bring with me a new perspective, and if something is completely new to me, I have to really delve into the issue to fully understand and write about it. And I have no doubt that, should I misunderstand something, I will be swiftly and thoroughly informed.

That brings me to the nitty-gritty. Please be patient as I get my bearings in Didsbury. I know it's a small town, but there's a lot to learn about this amazing little place. That said, I hope you'll trust my judgement. We might not always see eye to eye, though I'm sure we'll all have the town's best interests at heart.

I look forward to meeting all of you and enjoying everything Didsbury has to offer. Stop by the Review office and say hello if you feel like it – my door is always open.

Commentary At The Kitchen Table

When a Calgary Transit Driver refused to allow a lady on his bus because she was wearing too much perfume it must have been horribly embarrassing for the lady and I feel a certain sympathy for her, but I feel some sympathy for the bus driver as well. He could have been more diplomatic: "Ma'am, that's a lovely fragrance you're wearing but I seem to be highly allergic to it, I wonder if it would be possible for you to wait until after you get to work to apply it." And she could have been gracious and ladylike, "Why you poor thing, I'm so sorry you have such a problem."

Instead of the actual conversation, which was more like, "Lady your perfume stinks to high heaven and it makes me so sick that I am not allowing you on this bus." And her reply, "I am within my rights to wear whatever perfume I want while I am on public transport so shut up and drive."

I don't know where this story stands at the moment; last I heard, the bus driver had not relented and the lady was still spraying every morning. Maybe she walks to work, or takes an earlier bus with a less sensitive-nosed driver.

The word perfume comes from the Latin "per" and "fumus" and means "through the smoke." Which is exactly how the first perfume was received, because it was a fragrant scent carried in the smoke from the burning carcass of a sacrificial animal.

Perfume originated as a deodorizer to mask the stench of burning flesh. It was a form of incense and was one of the resins, frankincense, myrrh, cassia and spikenard. Burning these gums was the deepest homage a mortal could pay to the Gods. When sacrificial lambs were no longer fashionable and people did not need such heavy scents, light delicate fragrances from fruits and flowers became popular. By 3000 BC the Egyptians were bathing themselves in oils and alcohols from jasmine, iris, hyacinth and honeysuckle. Egyptian women used different perfumes on different parts of the body. Cleopatra put an oil composed of roses, crocus and violets on her hands, and on her feet she used a lotion made from almond oil, honey, cinnamon, orange blossoms and tinting henna.

In 400 BC, Greek writers recommended mint for the arms, cinnamon and rose for your chest, almond oil for hands and feet and extract of marjoram for hair and eyebrows. Young Greek men carried perfume to such an extreme that for a time there was a law prohibiting the sale of fragrant oils to Athenian men. And these guys were not on a bus! Roman soldiers wore perfume into battle, there were guilds of Roman perfumers and entire streets of perfume shops. The perfumes were made from crushed flowers, almonds, quince, spices and gums in an oil base and everything was perfumed – people, clothes, home furnishings, theatres. At funerals perfume was sprayed, doused and poured on everything, including the processional mules.

The Crusaders introduced animal oils, musk, ambergris, civit and castor. These scents alone are overpowering and unpleasant but when they are extremely diluted they act as a fixative for other scents. In their pure form they are terribly expensive. Ambergris is from the stomach of a sperm whale and is worth its weight in gold.

Today's perfume is unlikely to be made from pure anything and it is sometimes based on man-made chemicals that can actually be poisonous. I buy only unscented soaps, shampoos and lotions and usually I do just fine but I do not linger among the soaps and cleaners in the grocery store and there are a few perfumes that I can't tolerate. At a workshop a couple of years ago, a rose-scented lady came to sit beside me and my eyes began to water and my throat tickle. I had to excuse myself and move away. Once while I was buying a greeting card, a well-dressed woman smiled and reached past me for a card, a pleasant fragrance wafted over me and I thought I would choke to death and fall into the sympathy cards. If I'd had the strength I would have kicked her in the knee. I guess if I had to vote I'd vote with the bus driver.

Local man recognized for over 150 blood donations

BY STEPHANIE MYLES
Didsbury Review

Dan Peters is definitely not afraid of needles.

The Didsbury man was recently recognized by Canadian Blood Services for donating blood over 150 times.

It's no surprise Peters reached this number, since he's been donating weekly for the past two years.

"It's just important. It just is. Here's something you can do that doesn't really cost you anything," he said.

"You're giving something away and you don't even miss it."

Instead of donating whole blood, Peters gives blood plasma, a protein-rich component of blood used to support the body's immune system and control excessive bleeding.

While whole blood can only be donated every 52 days, plasma can be taken every week. For Peters, this means a trip to Calgary every Tuesday morning.

"It's almost like a little club because most people that do this, do this on a regular basis," he said.

Each weekly donation is about 515 grams of plasma - that's over 50,000 grams of life-saving plasma in two years.

"They hook you up to a machine and it takes whole blood out of your body," said Peters. "It spins the plasma into a bag ... and they pump red blood cells back into your body."

Peters said he decided to start donating blood because he's healthy and able.

"There's a lot of people that aren't healthy, there's a lot of people that can't give blood," he said.

"You just do it. They make a bigger deal out of it than I do."

Carla Victor/Didsbury Review

Five-acre residential subdivision opens up

BY STEPHANIE MYLES
Didsbury Review

Didsbury can look forward to more new housing as about five acres of former industrial land are now open for residential development.

Council re-zoned the land at Highway 582 and 14 Street to residential at its last meeting to make way for higher-density housing.

"What we're looking at very possibly is a duplex-type development very similar to what's to the south of (it), something that might be higher density than a single family type area," said Robert Wigg, the town's planning and development officer.

"We see that as a good use of the land for a number of reasons; one is to provide opportunities for some higher densities in town."

Wigg said the land would probably support 20 to 30 duplexes, depending on the site design. The developer must create a concept plan for the parcel and apply for development permits before any construction can begin.

Mayor Dorothy Moore said this kind of residential development is in line with the plan for Didsbury's future.

"These kind of multi-family developments are more sustainable for the future than urban sprawl," she said.

"These kind of multi-family developments are more sustainable for the future than urban sprawl."

Didsbury mayor

Moore said the residential zoning is more appropriate for the area because access to the land might eventually be through the existing residential neighbourhood to the south.

"It didn't seem that you'd want to have industrial traffic going through a residential area," she said, adding that preliminary plans indicate there will be a buffer between the new housing and the highway.

Council will have a chance to review plans for the area before they are finalized.

Hit-and-run death had Carstairs link

BY DAN SINGLETON
For the Didsbury Review

A 49-year-old man who court heard deliberately smashed his Durango into a parked truck in Carstairs in March 2005 to cover up a fatal hit-and-run accident in Calgary a day earlier has been found guilty in the fatality.

Colin Jones was tried in Calgary Court of Queen's Bench on a charge of hit and run causing death. The guilty verdict was delivered by Justice Allen Sulatycky on Apr. 11.

On March 17, 2005 20-year-old Lindsay Giacomelli was run down while she was walking on Bonaventure Drive in south Calgary. Jones, the driver of the Dodge Durango that hit the woman, fled the scene without offering any assistance.

One day later, Jones's Durango was in a collision with a semi-trailer truck parked on a Carstairs street.

"My opinion, this vehicle was involved in a secondary collision," retired Sgt. Russ van Aalst, head of the Calgary police hit and run unit, testified during the trial. "The secondary collision's sole purpose was to mask damage from the first collision."

Jones reported the non-injury accident to the Didsbury detachment on March 18, 2005.

He told police he had lost control on ice and ran into the parked semi-truck.

Following the Carstairs accident,

Jones rented a second vehicle and drove to Regina. He was subsequently arrested at an airport in Toronto as he waited for a flight to England.

Jones will be sentenced on May 15. The Crown will reportedly ask the judge to impose a penitentiary sentence.

Local women's shelter a possibility

RCMP, town working on domestic abuse shelter

BY PAUL FREY

For the Didsbury Review

The local detachment of the RCMP and the town are working closely together to bring a women's shelter to the area.

It's something the town's top cop believes is needed in the community.

"With the major increase of domestic violence we've seen . . . the demand (for shelter) has been ever greater. The time is right . . . to look into a project like this," said Sgt. Bob Phillips of the Olds RCMP.

He said as the town's population increases, the need for services will also spike.

Phillips has already seen an increase in the number of domestic violence calls over his 10-year tenure in Olds, and he feels the time is right to establish a local safe house that would shelter women and their children.

"During the process we have found a high need for a women's shelter in this town," he said. "This thing is very dear to me personally. It's something I feel very strongly about."

Currently, victims of abuse are taken to local hotels or are transported to either Red Deer or Calgary, where there are shelters available. Phillips said this emergency situation must change for victims to feel better about their situation. Often, when victims are moved out of the community, they lose any support structure they have, compounding the problem of difficult home lives. It's also an expensive proposition for the police, as they have to transport the victim, losing a member for the time it takes to shuttle victims and return to Olds.

"During the process we have found a high need for a women's shelter in this town. This thing is very dear to me personally. It's something I feel very strongly about."

SGT. BOB PHILLIPS

working together on the project. One option the detachment is looking at includes putting two trailers adjacent to the Olds detachment, housing a victim on a short-term basis and a detachment member in the other for added security.

"We're in the early stages right now and there's a lot to be worked out," Phillips said, adding that a number of grant possibilities are being researched to fund the project.

Phillips helped establish a similar service in Peace River while he was stationed there.

JUDY DAHL
Olds Mayor

Roberta Hammer, co-ordinator of the Chinook Arch Victims' Services Society, which serves Olds, Didsbury and Sundre, said there is a need for a shelter in Mountain View County. She said when a victim needs shelter the only options available, in Red Deer or Calgary, are often full.

"It's also difficult to convince people to leave the community," she said, adding that a shelter in the county would make it easier for victims, because schools for their children and jobs would be more accessible. Another drawback to victims leaving the community is Chinook Arch no longer has close contact with the victim.

Mayor Judy Dahl said she fully supports the service. She said council is hoping to see a proposal for the service from the RCMP in the near future.

"It's a necessity. You're certainly going to need the services," she said.

Dahl said it's incumbent upon the community to support the service and wholeheartedly support victims of domestic violence.

"I do truly support this . . . and if I can work with (the RCMP) on this I certainly will."

Preliminary designs started for continuing care

BY STEPHANIE MYLES
Didsbury Review

Plans for the new continuing care unit at the Didsbury hospital are underway and construction is scheduled for early 2008.

The Calgary Health Region has started preliminary designs for the 60-room addition to the northeast section of the hospital.

Larry Raymond, project manager for the health region, said the design process will take several months in order to create a unit specific to Didsbury's needs.

"It takes a long time because it's so overwhelming and there's so much detail and thinking that goes into these before we put pencil to paper," said Raymond.

"We get a lot of information before we get into the drawing of the rooms."

The health region will be meeting with hospital staff this week to discuss designs for patient rooms and find out what equipment staff need. Raymond said recent interviews with community focus groups also yielded design input.

"We have a group of people who have residents in the facility, so we were talking to them as well to get their input, like, what would you like to see when you come into the long-term care centre? Do you want it to be home-like, do you want it to be institutional-like?" he said.

So far, Raymond said preliminary plans indicate the addition will use as much space as possible and butt up against the town's utility right-of-way.

"We want to work with the town to try and move the utility right of way slightly and increase the space that we have, and town council seems to be on-side with us right now," he said.

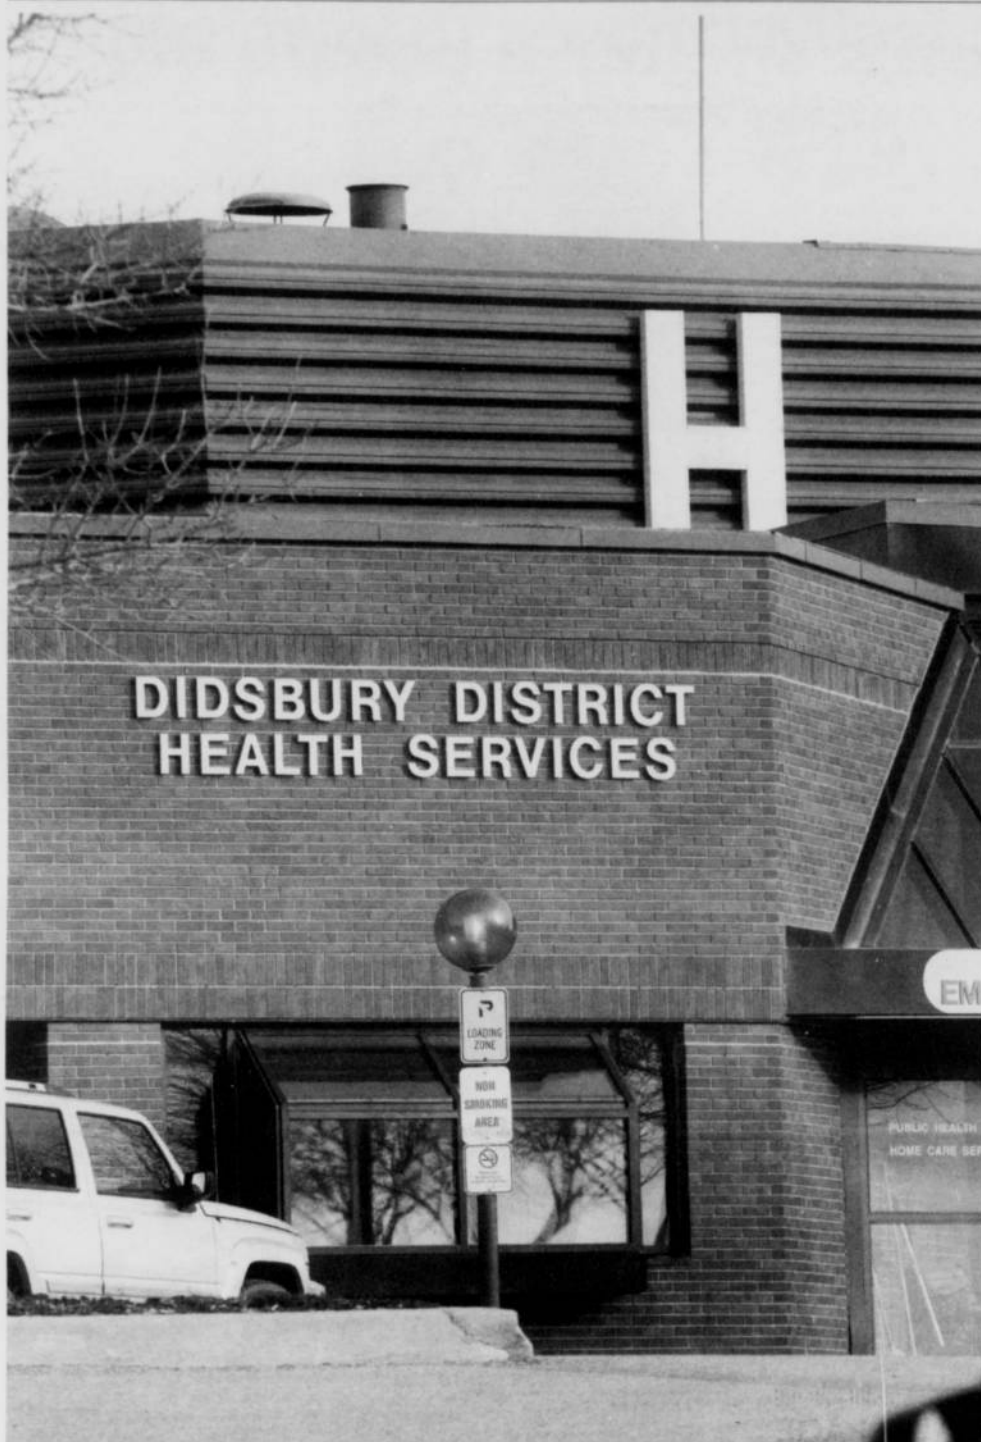

The health region and the town will form a cost sharing agreement to move the right-of-way.

Raymond said total cost of the project won't be determined until a preliminary design is complete. The design process is being funded by a six-million-dollar grant awarded in 2000, when the project was first proposed. Changes in regional health authorities caused delays in moving forward with the expansion.

The new continuing care unit will replace one of the hospital's two long-term care wings, which has been closed because of the age and condition of the building.

"It takes a long time because it's so overwhelming and there's so much detail and thinking that goes into these before we put pencil to paper."

Backyard music festival moves to town centre

BY FAYE BAYKO
For the Didsbury Review

Jason and Sheldon Valleau hope to shake up the summer in Carstairs when they bring the second annual Mountain View Music Festival out of their backyard and into a downtown ball park on Aug. 11.

The brothers and co-founders of the popular Polyjesters band held a mini-festival in their backyard last year with three weeks of preparation and hope to repeat their success this year in a larger, more central and public location. Their request for permission to hold the music festival in the small baseball diamond went before Town council April 10 and was approved.

This year the festival will also run all day, said Jason. "If the gazebo's up, then, what I would like to do is to stick a Dixieland band on it in the morning for the older crowd."

While most summer music festivals follow a theme, the elder Valleau said he wished to make the event family oriented with something for everyone.

"I want to get as much variety in there as I can because it is, after all, a music festival," said Jason Valleau during an interview, April 13, at a friend's place in Calgary. "It's not a country music festival, it's not a jazz festival, it's not a folk festival. It's all of them."

Last year's festival featured four bands playing two sets each. This year each band will play one set each in order to allow more to perform. Along with the host band, The Polyjesters, there are discussions that may see the return of an up-close, unplugged Patricia Conroy performing with her husband Bob Funk. The Plaid Tongued Devils, who were hailed out last year, are also expected this year. Tara Hazleton, featured vocalist with the Jeff Healey band, will be returning as will ragtime guitarist Dan Livingstone out of Montreal.

Patrick Roach (Randy) and John Dunsworth (Mr. Lahey) who perform in the hit series The Trailer Park Boys may bring their unique perspective to the festivities as co-hosts.

"It is going to be a family festival," he stressed. "And when they're in that capacity they're on their best behaviour. They're there in more of a celebrity role."

The Polyjesters had toured with the two and the road version of the Trailer Park Boys.

The small ball diamond was requested as a location in order to keep the event intimate and manageable, said Jason. "There's not that much shade so most of the (audience) will be seated on grass."

Even with last year's event conflicting with the rodeo it drew a healthy crowd of approximately 300 to the Valleaus' backyard. This year the brothers chose a weekend that would not conflict with the rodeo but realize that by moving it into a more central location there is potential for things to spin out of control.

"My focus is to sort of show, like, I'm from a small town. I'm from Didsbury. I know Carstairs well. It's where my grandparents are from. So, I really want to show there's a lot to offer here," he said. "We right on the way between Calgary and Edmonton, it's a great stop for bands. It's a beautiful town. And the park in the centre of town is a better location for a festival than a lot of places that I've ever played at. So, why not use it."

Faye Bayko/Didsbury Review

JANGLIN' THE CHUNK - Brothers Sheldon Valleau, 31, and Jason Valleau, 33, check out the setting for the second annual Mountain View Music Festival which will be held on Aug. 11 at the small baseball diamond in downtown Carstairs.

To keep the small-town, home-grown flavour to the event, Jason is hoping to attract not only those volunteers who assisted with last year's festival but many more, including a festival committee.

The other part of taking that step into a larger venue is the financial risk. The concert will remain free, the same as it was last year. Those attending will instead be asked to make a donation. Jason is hoping to solicit some sponsorship over the next few weeks but will be offering a unique twist in trade.

"This year we have another thing that's come into play that's going to make this festival interesting. I have a little radio station through the Internet called Kitchen Radio. It's actually getting bigger and bigger, like globally which is great."

A limited-area broadcast will be set up within a nine-mile radius of Carstairs for a period of 28 days up to and including the day of the festival.

"I'll be able to call up like Randy, Patricia Conroy, and the other musicians on the phone. people can hear them on the radio telling Carstairs that they're coming to Carstairs."

Jason not only sees the air time as an opportunity to invite local musicians to submit their discs to have selections hosted but to invite the local Town council to sit down at his kitchen table to broadcast discussions of upcoming events.

The short-term radio broadcast will assist with building community interest in the event said Jason and with it the assistance needed both physically through volunteers and financially through sponsorship.

In the meantime there are mundane tasks to be taken care of. "There are permits that they need to apply for that address security, garbage, noise, and other common concern," said Town of Carstairs chief administrative officer Carl MacDonnell.

Tour recognizes firefighting heroes

BY CHRISTI ALBERS
For the Didsbury Review

Local singer Kym Simon is doing her part to support the volunteer firefighters of Innisfail and other central Alberta communities through singing.

Simon has started a tour to honour and support the volunteer firefighters of various communities around Central Alberta.

Simon was hit by the realization that many civilians don't give as much thought to the Emergency Services workers as they should.

"These men and women, brothers, sisters, mothers and fathers put their lives on the line for their communities," says Simon. "We don't consider the training that goes on or the struggle to perform miracles."

The "Light Your Fire" tour kicks off in Simon's hometown of Stettler and will wrap up in Lacombe.

The tour, Simon hopes will create more awareness about the unsung heroes of our central Alberta communities known as volunteer firefighters. She also hopes it will shine some light on the selflessness and dedication of these community volunteers.

"Physical danger is not the only risk these firefighters take, there is also a strong emotional investment," says Simon. "Due to the dynamics of living in a small community, they often know the victims of these tragedies."

Simon will be singing at the Sundre Community Centre on May 12 at 7 p.m.

Tickets are $35 plus an agent fee. Everyone will receive a fee CD at the performance and $5 from each ticket sold goes towards your local Fire Department.

For tickets to any of the singer's shows, or more information head to ticketmaster.ca or phone 403-340-4455.

APPLICATIONS NO.: 1475525 AND 1499441

TAYLOR PROCESSING INC.
HARMATTAN-ELKTON FIELDS

Take Notice that the Alberta Energy and Utilities Board (EUB/Board) will hold a public hearing of Applications No. 1475525 and 1499441 at the Cremona Community Centre, 302 Centre Street, Cremona, Alberta, commencing on Wednesday, May 23, 2007, at the hour of 10:00 a.m. All interveners to this proceeding must be present at the commencement of the hearing to register their appearance.

Nature of Application No. 1475525

Taylor Processing Inc. (Taylor) submitted an application in accordance with Part 4 of the Pipeline Act for approval to construct and operate two natural gas pipelines and one high vapour pressure (HVP) pipeline. The first natural gas pipeline would transport gas from the TransCanada Pipelines Ltd. (TCPL) Western Alberta System at Legal Subdivision (LSD) 1 of Section 23, Township, 31, Range 5, West of the 5th Meridian to a tie-in point at its existing Harmattan-Elkton sulphur recovery facility at LSD 15-27-31-4W5M for the purpose of natural gas liquids recovery. The proposed pipeline would have an outside diameter of 610 millimetres (mm) and would be about 8.4 kilometres (km) in length with a maximum hydrogen sulphide (H₂S) concentration of 0.00 moles per kilomole (mol/kmol) (0.00 per cent (%)). The second proposed natural gas pipeline would transport the residue gas with a maximum H₂S concentration of 0.00 mol/kmol (0 %) from the Harmattan-Elkton sulphur recovery facility back to the TCPL sales system south of the Inter Pipeline Cochrane Extraction Plant at LSD 9-16-26-4W5M. The proposed pipeline would have an outside diameter of 610 mm and would be about 67.40 km in length. The proposed HVP pipeline would transport recovered liquids from the Harmattan-Elkton sulphur recovery facility to Taylor's existing Didsbury Loading Terminal at LSD 2-25-31-2W5M. The proposed pipeline would have an Emergency Planning Zone of about 0.8 km, an outside diameter of 168.3 mm and would be about 23.40 km in length.

Nature of Application No. 1499441

Taylor has applied pursuant to Section 39 (1) (b) of the Oil and Gas Conservation Act requesting approval to amend Taylor's existing Harmattan-Elkton sulphur recovery facility at LSD 9-27-31-5W5M, Facility Licence No. 4285. Taylor has applied to add two 2240 kilowatt and one 6340 kilowatt compressors to the existing facility. The facility is designed to process 13,897.60 thousand cubic metres (103 m³) per day of sour natural gas with a maximum H₂S content of 4.5 mol/kmol (0.450 %) from which 11,274.3 103 m³ per day of sales gas, 3,971.4 cubic metres per day (m³/d) of ethane (C₂), 1795.1 m³/d of propane (C₃), 987.6 m³/d of butane (C₄) and 1,118.4 m³/d of pentanes plus (C₅+) is recovered. The facility is designed to recover about 81.30 tonnes per day of sulphur equivalent. The facility is located approximately 27 kilometres west of Didsbury and 15 km north of Cremona.

Mike Ryan was only eight years old when he first started getting into trouble. By the time he was 13 he faced his first youth conviction. And as he got older, things didn't get any better. During the 1960s and 70s Ryan was one of the top ten drug offenders in Alberta and was a drug trafficker into the 1980s.

But Ryan's involvement with drugs ended with his release from jail in 1989. He said a series of events in his life prompted a change and he started to turn things around.

"Mostly people that I knew and who shared things with me and shared change with me," he said from his home in Edmonton.

"I had quite a run at it. I really noticed how badly (drugs) were destroying my body and my life."

After completing a 12-step program, Ryan has been sober for almost 19 years. Today, he takes those dark times in his past and uses them as a way to educate youth about what drugs really are. In 2002, Ryan founded Clean Scene Network for Youth.

Since then, the charitable organization has presented to over 200,000 people at more than 200 schools and events. Ryan will be in Innisfail April 17 at St.

Marguerite Bourgeys School to share his experiences with students and parents. He will show through personal tragedy that "drugs lead nowhere but institutions, jails, and death."

"We'll be sharing some personal experience. That's basically what we do," he said. "We use personal experience or first hand experience of the drug world to get them to understand the dangers."

Ryan explained that his presentation will cover various topics such as drug prevention, what drugs do to a person, the health consequences, different ways to think and most importantly, peer pressure.

"The number one problem with young people today is them pushing each other into using drugs," he said.

He believes speaking to young people and educating them is important because many don't know the true facts about drug use. Ryan said many youth get myths or misconceptions from their friends about drugs. His presentation gives them a straight look at what it's really about.

"Many of them are very much at risk of using drugs," he explained. "There is no young person out there who is totally invulnerable to it. Even the best developed young person is vulnerable, if they don't know the truth about it."

Alberta Alcohol and Drug Abuse Commission (AADAC) at the Henwood Treatment Centre. He also has a Bachelor of Arts in Psychology from Athabasca University.

But Ryan believes it is in sharing his personal experiences of the drug world that really makes an impact on students. His interactive sessions allow for a frank question and answer period about how he turned his life around. Through the Clean Scene program, Ryan can help students deal with life changes through facilitating the learning of effective thinking skills.

He said that the one message he hopes young people get out of his presentation is simple: choose to be drug free.

"Make good choices in your life," Ryan said. "My bottom line is I choose to be drug free and I hope that they'll think about it once I've talked to them. What I'm after is them making good choices in their life."

Mike Ryan will be presenting for middle school students at St. Marguerite in Innisfail on April 17 at 9 a.m. and an evening session at 7 p.m. in the St. Marguerite gym.

Aside from being the CEO and program director for Clean Scene in Edmonton, Ryan has worked with at risk youth for the past 15 years. He has been a project director for The Pacific Institute of Seattle Washington and a client care assistant for

Telus Cup ticket sales are slow

BY FAYE BAYKO

For the Didsbury Review

Carstairs is showing slow ticket sales for the 2007 national Midget AAA championship, the Telus Cup.

"The Red Deer games are all sold out," said Mike Van Tetering, president of Carstairs Minor Hockey. "I anticipate strong walk-up sales."

Tickets will be available at the door but can be purchased prior to game day through the Carstairs Courier newspaper office, 2A Gas in Carstairs, Kreb's Veterinary in Didsbury and Kal Tire in Crossfield, or through Marie Pedersen.

The Carstairs minor hockey association is hosting two games at the Carstairs arena April 24 at 7 p.m. and April 27 at 4 p.m. Teams from across Canada will be participating in the championship challenge April 23 to 29, with the majority of the games played in Red Deer. The opportunity to host games in Carstairs will provide much needed financial support to the association and will go a long way toward keeping the sport affordable for young families, said Van Tetering.

"It will go toward covering next year's expenses," he said. "We have to do these fundraisers to try to keep our fees down. We haven't had a fee increase in Carstairs for several years and we're trying to keep it that way."

A silent auction and several give aways will add to the fun of the games.

Smackdown coming

BY BARRY WILLIAMS
For the Didsbury Review

A rank pen of bulls will make Caroline their home on Sat. April 21, 2007 as the annual Small Town Smackdown bullarama will open the chutes at the Kurt Browning Complex.

Besides two go-rounds of bull riding, the event will include a beer gardens and a dance to follow after the conclusion of the bull riding.

Produced by Main Event Inc. of Bowden, the event is expected to attract the top bull riders from across North America, Australia and New Zealand.

As one of the most popular events on the World Professional Bullriding Inc. tour, an extra $4,000 in prize money has been added to the purse.

After the bull tamers complete the event, they will pack up their saddlebags and ride into Torrington for the Go Fur Broke Bull and Bash scheduled for the Torrington Arena on Sat. May 5. An added $4,000 in prize money has made the Torrington event a bull rider's dream.

Heading into Caroline, American Scott Crump of St. Ignatus Mont. holds down the top spot in the World Professional Bullriding Inc. standings with 1,000 points.

With 660 points apiece Huxley, AB bull rider Kirby Black, as well as Sylvan Lake's Neal Wallator share second place. Meanwhile, Cochrane rider, Beau Brooks, currently holds down third spot with 550 points while Jordie Campbell of Blindloss, sits in fourth place with 490 points.

At the latest WPB sanctioned event at Rimbey, the scores soared into the high 80s as the riders and the critters combined for some spectacular electrifying rides.

In the long go, Brett Kartchner of Cardston, had no reason to head home as he scored 89.5 points aboard a Girlitz's bull, Steeling Home, to record the highest mark of the event.

Clive bull rider, Brad Walker, appeared nice and relaxed on his mount, Trach's Lazy Boy, scoring an 84 point ride good enough for second spot.

Claiming third with a ride worth 82 points on Trach's Nestor was Granum rider, Travis Warburton.

Finishing in fourth place was Cochrane's Beau Brooks with a ride worth 80 points on Girlitz's Spawn.

Rounding out the top five riders was Dustin Tompkins of Carstairs, racking up 77.5 points on Tic Tac To.

Walking out of the infield with the final spot of qualifying for the short go was St. Ignatus, Mont. rider, Scott Crump, securing a 74 score on Walking Tall.

Although the Rimbey bullarama was held a long way from the bright lights of Calgary, Crump was the only rider with a qualified ride in the short go, 79 points on City Lights.

With the points garnered in Rimbey, Crump took over the top spot in the current WPB standings with 1,000 points.

Two riders, Kirby Black and Neal Wallator, share second place with 660 points.

Rounding out the top five positions are Beau Brooks with 550 points and Jordie Campbell with 490 points.

All WPB events are produced by Bowden's Ty Northcott owner of Main Event Inc.

Travelling exhibit at your local library

CHILD'S PLAY II is an exhibition of 18 mixed-media, two-dimensional artworks by nine artists. This exhibition has been curated from the original exhibition, CHILD'S PLAY, by members of the Alberta Society of Artists, which was displayed during the fall of 2004 at the McMullen Gallery in Edmonton's University Hospital.

The focus of this exhibition is to have artists imagine the world through the eyes of a child, thus allowing themselves to surrender to this creative influence. Several of the artists selected for CHILD'S PLAY II chose to use their own childhood drawings or an experience recalled, for inspiration, while others chose to work with a child close to them. CHILD'S PLAY II will remind us of the playful nature of children's art and reminds us of the innocence and imaginative response to their surroundings.

West Didsbury 4-H Club news

The West Didsbury 4-H club had another fun and busy month in March. On Mar. 10 we catered and cleaned up at the Deeg/Westway Bull Sale. It was lots of fun. Thanks to the Prairie Partners Club for helping with this fundraiser!

The next day the club hosted a Curling Funspeil in Didsbury and ran the concession. Everybody made some great shots and a lucky few got to take home some great prize money!

At the end of March, our club ran the admission table at the Didsbury Trade Show as another fundraiser.

All of our beef projects are doing well. We are looking forward to our club tour of members' calves on Apr. 12.

Some of our upcoming events are: 4-H Funday Bowling on Apr. 13, our mock steer/heifer show on May 12, Heifer show on May 19.

Mark your calendars now for May 23 for the Carstairs and District Show and Sale.

I hope everyone had a happy Easter and a great Easter break!

FREE FROM THE PAPARAZZI – This young bald eagle suffers through a photo scrum with the Central Alberta Photographic Society paparazzi before being released back into the wild by Carol Kelly, founder of the Medicine River Wildlife Centre. Kelly and her son, Todd, released two bald eagles back into the wild at Red Deer's Mackenzie Trail park on Wednesday. Both of the scavenger birds, a male and a female between the ages of one and three years old, arrived at the centre last fall and winter with wings that were broken after being hit by cars.

Having a healthy sex life has nothing to do with HOW OFTEN YOU DO "IT."

HOW TO HAVE A HEALTHY SEX LIFE:

1. Get tested for sexually transmitted infections.
2. Wear a condom during anal, oral or vaginal sex.
3. Carry condoms - even if you don't think you'll have an encounter.
4. Limit your number of partners.
5. Delay sexual activity until you're older.
6. Talk to your partner about your sexual histories.

If you are in a relationship, get tested after six months of protected sex before you stop using condoms.

Tests for sexually transmitted infections usually only require a simple urine or blood test.

Doing "it" a lot can be a lot of fun. To enjoy a healthy sex life, take care of your sexual health and protect yourself from sexually transmitted infections. Right now sexually transmitted infections like Syphilis, Chlamydia and Gonorrhea are all on the rise in our communities and if you are sexually active, you are at risk.

The problem with treating sexually transmitted infections is that in most cases there are no symptoms. This means that you can be infected and not even know it. You could also be passing it on to unsuspecting partners. If left untreated, a sexually transmitted infection like Chlamydia can cause reproductive problems for women including pelvic inflammatory disease and infertility.

The good news is there are ways to protect yourself and reduce your chances of being infected. You should limit your number of partners and always use condoms during anal, oral and vaginal sex. If you are in a relationship, talk to your partner about your sexual past and get tested after six months of protected sex before you stop using condoms. If you have had unprotected sex, you should get tested after each encounter. The tests are free, confidential and usually only require a simple urine or blood test. If you find out you are infected, get treatment for yourself and make sure that your sexual partners get tested and treated too. Try not to let it affect your self-esteem. It is up to you to take control of your sexual health and protect yourself.

For more information on sexual health, talk to your family physician or visit calgaryhealthregion.ca

180. Thank You

180. Thank You

From the family of Herman Wollen
We would like to express a heartfelt thanks from Wynne Wollen and her children to the community of Didsbury for their support and sympathy at the passing of Herman Wollen; husband, father, grandfather and great grandfather. Friends and neighbours provided meals and assistance during the week. We would especially like to thank Dr. Jaffer and his nurse, Leah, for the exceptional care they took of Herman during this past year. Wynne and Herman were the first residents of MountainView Lodge. The feelings of care and friendship from residents and staff at the lodge have made it a wonderful home Wynne will continue to live there. In the spirit of ecumenism, the Zion Evangelical Missionary Church offered us their wonderful facility to help Herman's Catholic mass of resurrection. A wonderful lunch was provided through the cooperation of the Zion ladies and St. Anthony's CWL. Representing St. Anthony's church both at prayers and the funeral were Claude and Margaret Baril, with Elizabeth Baril and Nathan Groot as altar servers. MountainView Funeral Chapels were able to meet all our needs without being intrusive. Our family would like to thank all of you for your kind words, flowers and donations and most of all prayers.
